

ENDS LIFE WITH ACID BECAUSE HUSBAND IS TOO PROSPEROUS

Wife of Simon Bruckerman,
Canal Street Bookseller,
Objected to New Store.

Slavery to business was responsible for the death of Sarah Bruckerman, forty-two years of age, wife of Simon Bruckerman and the mother of his five children. She could not stand the prosperity which separated her from her husband and children, so she swallowed the contents of a four ounce vial of carbolic acid and died.

Bruckerman for years has been the proprietor of a book store at No. 50 Canal street. Recently he opened another store at Fifty-ninth street and Third avenue. A few days ago he accepted the agency of a Russian publication house.

Everything was going along nicely. The two eldest children worked in the bookstore; the third child attended school. The two youngest—Louis and Rose, aged six and seven—stayed home with their mother. Mrs. Bruckerman bewailed the constant absence of her husband and their two eldest children.

She wanted home life. There was too much business, she said. When her husband accepted the Russian agency she was in despair.

"Now I will never see you or the children at all," she said. "There is nothing for me but to kill myself."

The husband remained home with his wife last night. He reassured her and kept constant vigil over her. Soon, he said, they would make money enough and retire. His wife smiled. She had heard the story before. At 10 o'clock A. M. to-day, the book dealer, worn out from the vigil, fell asleep. Then the wife sent the servant out on an errand and herself went down to the Canal street store. She returned in less than an hour to her apartments in the Valente, No. 512 East Broadway. The elevator boy noticed that she was agitated. She had barely alighted from the cage at her floor when the boy heard a scream.

The husband was awakened. He found his wife writhing on the floor, the empty vial at her side. Paul Harrison, a druggist at No. 27 Canal street, was taken to Police Headquarters to be questioned by the Coroner as to selling the poison to the woman. He denied that he had sold her any.

Louise, the eldest daughter of Mrs. Bruckerman, declared to the police that she had gone to the drug store and purchased a duplicate of the bottle and contents which had ended the life of her mother. The druggist vehemently denied having sold the poison to Louise. The law says that no druggist or anybody else shall sell greater than a five per cent. solution of carbolic acid without a physician's prescription.

THUGS BEAT CHAUFFEUR.
CUT TIRES OF AUTO TRUCK.

Attack Follows Trouble of Drug
Syndicate With Some of Its Employees.

A bold assault was made to-day on Borden avenue, Long Island City, upon John Gaffney, driver of an auto-truck, who was dragged from the truck and beaten with a blackjack.

Gaffney is thirty-one years old, lives at No. 101 West Thirty-sixth street and is employed by the Pierce-Arrow Company. He was driving an auto-truck for the American Drug Syndicate. Four men took part in the attack. After beating the chauffeur they cut the tires of the truck and fled.

The American Drug Syndicate is said to have had trouble with some employees. The chauffeur was taken to St. John's Hospital. His condition is said to be serious.
